

Mandatory and Best Efforts Committing – Two Great Execution Options

By selling whole loans to Fannie Mae, you can generate immediate funds for additional mortgage originations. There are two execution options available to our customers in Pricing & Execution – Whole Loan™:

Mandatory: You commit to deliver a specified dollar amount of mortgage loans at a set price by a specific date. If you are not able to fulfill the terms of your commitment, you may be subject to a pair-off fee.

Best Efforts: You commit to sell a loan to us, but if the loan does not close, you typically will not be charged a pair-off fee.

You determine how to best manage the loans in your pipeline by choosing between the two committing options. At any time, one or the other may be better for your business goals. And you may use either option on a loan-by-loan basis. The side-by-side comparison of the two options provided below can assist you in making this decision.
